as to how they might escape the threatened penalty, and speedily come to the conclusion that the best way of getting out of their scrape would be to drawn themselves. One of them bad just had a new hat, adersed with a gray peac ck's feather, given to him, which he sold for thirteen kreu zers to a little peasant girl, who had been at play with the boys when the dreadful menace of punishment was imparted to them.

With the price of this hat he purchased some small loaves, and the three children sat down by the Marcs to hold their "Pamoua," or death teast, and this being terminated the boys climbed the parapet of the Maros bridge, their tiny playmate counted aloud "O-e, two, three," and at the word 'three' they sprang hand in hand into the river, sicking immediately under the broken ice with which the surface of the rapid stream was partially povered.

AN AWFUL MEAL -A terrible story reaches the Petersburg Herald from Samara. Some few days ago the wife of a skilled artisan, named Schmid, of that town, was brought to bed of a child, while her hu band, who had become a confirmed set, and apant all his wases for many previous weeks in liquor, was away from home upoe a drunken from Two days after her confinement Schmid staggered in about moon, and began to shout, with borrible thrests and carses, fir his dinner. To Schmid's bruint me ones his miserable wife made no answer. Silently she rose from her sorded pallet, wan and im ciated, a mere specire of a woman, crept acres the room to the dresser, took though a large dish, which she carried back to the bed, and, placing her baby's corpse upon the dish, set it down on the table before her husband. with the simple, but awful, words, "There is nothing else to eat in the house!" Schmid sat gazing with a glassy stare of his dead child for some time. Presently a cough bor came in and sp ke to him, but he uttered no word and made no sign. Upon closer examination he was found to have entirely lost his reason, and he was conveyed to the Samara madbouse,
